CANADIAN DOCTOR SUDDEN DEATHS HAVE REACHED 150 SINCE COVID-19 VACCINES ROLLED OUT OUR CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION CELEBRATES THE OCCASION WITH A FULL PAGE PFIZER AD

Dr. Makis

These days, there are far stronger morals, ethics and honorable behavior in the Mexican drug cartels, than in Canada's entire healthcare leadership.

We've just reached 150 Canadian doctor sudden deaths, since COVID-19 vaccines rolled out on Dec.14, 2020.

Canadian Medical Association, which continues to push the toxic Pfizer and Moderna mRNA jabs on its own doctor members, has chosen to mark this milestone with a full page Pfizer ad on the back cover of its April 2023 issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal, presumably in exchange for a few pieces of silver.

Former Canadian Medical Association President (2018-2019) Dr.Gigi Osler spent the entire pandemic promoting Moderna mRNA vaccines and was rewarded by Justin Trudeau with an appointment to the Canadian Senate on Sep.26, 2022:

Shockingly, that is Senator Dr.Gigi Osler illegally promoting the Moderna mRNA vaccine using her daughter, while she mocks the COVID-19 vaccine injured in a May 2021 TikTok video captioned "We believe in Moderna - testing magnets on my newly (Moderna) vaccinated daughter" . She "did not get magnetized" .

Perhaps not so funny to those who were injured or died from the Moderna mRNA jab.

CMA Leaders who pushed Pfizer & Moderna mRNA vaccines were extremely well compensated:
Current CMA President Dr.Alika Lafontaine, who ignored the sudden deaths of 150 Canadian doctors (who are CMA members), has big hopes and dreams of becoming Prime Minister of Canada one day.

On Sep.26, 2022 he wrote in regards to Dr.Gigi Osler's promotion: "Hoping to see a CMA President as Prime Minister one day too".

He is the current CMA President. Does he hope to replace Justin Trudeau?

But before he becomes Prime Minister of Canada, CMA President Dr.Alika Lafontaine made sure to cross out my photos of the faces of his dead Canadian doctor colleagues with a big red "X" . Not a very classy act for a future PM.

Canadian Senator Dr.Gigi Osler was a bit more subtle - she reposted a hit piece that was done on me by Global News in January 2023, which mocked the sudden deaths of Canadian doctors by claiming that a 25 year old Global News reporter, Ashleigh Stewart, "solved" most of these doctor deaths without a single autopsy report.

Dr.Gigi Osler has no idea that the number of Canadian doctor sudden deaths is now 150, but then again, she doesn't give a damn. She has already been well compensated for her "services" .

It amazes me that these Canadian doctor "leaders" sold their souls, their medical ethics and their Hippocratic Oath to "do no harm", for so little. Was it worth it?

They certainly believe it was

When Freedom Calls Captain Alberta

During the protests in Ottawa there were many people out of the spotlight that were essential in keeping people on the ground safe, hopeful and calm. Some were providing food, some spiritual and emotional support and some were working hard to keep trucks fueled and truckers warm in their vehicles. One such member being nicknamed Captain Alberta.

Kyle, born in Edmonton Alberta, knew from the beginning of the of the lockdowns that something was off. Watching the Prime Minister divide the country, demonize and ostracize people in his community, he knew that he had to start doing something to help bring people together. As a Journeyman Electrician, he was forced to test twice a week to stay employed while his cohorts who were vaccinated were able to come to work, sick or not, without testing, so when Convoy came through the Edmonton area and he saw thousands of people gathered for the send off he felt inspired, hopeful, and he knew he needed to be there. Kyle made the decision then to hand in his keys, pack his car and set out to meet up with Convoy in Regina.

The journey to Ottawa was a spiritual one for many and Kyle was no different. He tells the stories we have all heard of the people lining the highways, the Canadians coming together, full of love for strangers, offering supplies and hugs and shedding tears. There was hope again in the eyes of Canadians who had been so beaten down by the people who promised to have their back. The people elected to protect them from the very actions they were perpetrating. He talks about the endless trucks coming in from all directions, the sea of lights in the dark being a beacon of warmth for those who had felt so alone for so long. A feeling that only overflowed as he got closer to Ottawa.

During the weeks Convoy was in Ottawa Kyle gave as much of himself as he could. He saw a need to help get fuel to the trucks, to help keep them warm and so he hit the ground running.

He started buying fuel out of his own pocket eventually using his entire life savings, and transporting it to the trucks and when he could no longer buy fuel more Canadians jumped on board donating to help. The obstacles and challenges that came his way only served to solidify that he was doing what needed to be done. He remembers the overwhelming feeling of love while people brought jerry cans and milk jugs after the fuel was stolen by Police, the staggering support from Ottawa citizens to stand with Convoy and find ways to keep these trucks stay fueled and keep families safe and warm.

Since Convoy ended, Kyle has moved been staying with the love of his life, a young woman he met in Ottawa. He left his job not knowing what the future held, only knowing that Convoy was a cause worth giving it all up for. He is doing well, has remained hopeful about Canadas future and looks to the future knowing the strength of Canadians can overcome anything together.

FAMILY TIES AND COVID LIES KYLE KEMPER

They say that blood is thicker than water, but where does that leave you when Canadians have risen up against the brother you have looked up to and respected throughout your life? I had a call with Kyle Kemper, brother of Justin Trudeau, to get his thoughts on Freedom Convoy, Covid lockdowns, and seeing the damage that someone he loves dearly has done to Canadians.

These are his thoughts..

At the beginning of Covid restrictions Kyle was traveling back and forth to see his kids in Ottawa and spending time with his family in San Diego. When the restrictions came into effect he had to make the tough choice to make America his home base which meant less frequent trips in order to avoid being completely separated from either side of his family. As restrictions moved forward, Kyle saw the dangers of how far these restrictions were being taken, knowing in his heart they were based on lies meant to divide, and his respect and love for his brother turned into sadness and disappointment. He now saw Justin as a pawn for the global elites, no longer a leader, but puppet and a tool to be used by those who wished to destroy the fabric of Canadian society.

He talks about witnessing the hate and division that Justin was stoking throughout Canada along with the fear mongering and dehumanizing of those who wouldn't comply. He feels that all of the name calling and toxicity coming from his brother is not only Justin projecting his inadequacies onto Canadians but also part of the WEF plan, a distraction to have people focused on hating the Prime Minister and off the people controlling him. When asked if Justin was someone that would listen and consider opposing views growing up Kyle described his brother as very stubborn, someone who has a strong ego, loves to be centre of attention and who would push back on anyone who threatened his world view, making him a willing participant in the destruction of Canada.

"He needs to apologize." Kyle said of his brother. "He needs to come clean and be self aware."

While he understands why people are focused on Trudeau he also warns of giving Justin too much of our energy. He is just a spokesperson for the corporate Liberal party, an energy vacuum. He feels that while warranted, the negativity directed specifically at Justin is not going to solve the issues. Canada has fallen and Canadians need to come together, put our energy into civic engagement, start getting involved. He hopes more people will actively pursue positions on school boards, in municipal politics and work to reimagine Canada's political system, giving Switzerland as an example. Freedom Convoy was a beacon of light, a place of hope, inspiring him, inspiring Canadians and inspiring the world, and Kyle feels that if we put those efforts into our local communities, we can make change.

"Justin is the intolerable."
-Kyle Kemper

I asked Kyle, if he had one message to send to Canadians, left and right, as a whole, what would that message be, his response was inspiring.

Ho'oponopono

We must love each other
We must apologize for our wrongdoings
We must ask for forgiveness
We must express appreciation.

We need to stop the divide.
We all want to be free, to be healthy and prosperous.
It is time to start healing.

THE HORRORS OF LTC CARE DURING COVID The Forgotten Victims of Government Overreach

The divisive Covid-19 restrictions were incredibly harmful to both the mental and physical health of Canadians as a whole, but the untold stories of some of Canada's most vulnerable are especially egregious. From families being denied access to their child's major life events, to restrictions around funerals preventing loved ones from saying their final goodbyes, Canadians dealt with the harsh realities of an overbearing government putting their hands in places they don't belong in the name of public safety. Many Canadians have been speaking out about their experiences, but what about the forgotten, the elderly in long term care facilities, isolated and abandoned by the system, forced to live their last days alone, no family permitted to see them, under the guise of protecting them from Covid.

Marilyn, a woman from Ottawa, lived through some of the harshest restrictions surrounding her family. Not only was her brother a patient in a long term care facility, but also her mother who suffers from dementia and parkinson's. At the time Marylin had power of attorney over her brother and was an essential care giver for her mother. Not only did her brother Greg, who suffered from a psychiatric disability have to spend the last year of his life alone, but anything she had tried to do for him was denied. She tells the story of her brother wanting nothing more than some Macintosh apples, how she bought the apples, washed them, packaged them up and dropped them off only to find out that they were never given to him. The lockdown procedures in this LTC facility were torturous, visitors could not enter without the vaccine, but anytime a staff member had tested positive for Covid the entire facility went into isolation causing residents to be locked in their rooms for 14 days.

Finally, Marilyn got the call that her brother had become unresponsive and was granted the ability to see him. For the last hour of his life, he finally had his sister by his side.

*"Convoy gave me a voice."
-Marilyn*

At the same time she was being denied access to her brother, she was not able to see her mother. After her mother's fourth vaccine her health declined and she had to stay in hospital. Marilyn believes the vaccine took her mothers ability to walk, she stopped talking, and wasn't able to feed herself. When she was finally able to see her mother, she had to agree to the nose swab every day causing serious sinus pain, likened to feeling like torture, but to finally be able to care for her mother she endured.

All of this, all of the pain and heartache that Marilyn had to cope with, she found life again when Convoy showed up in Ottawa. Although she couldn't convince herself get out and walk around, she drove down to the protests to see for herself. In a time where she felt there was no place for her to heal from the passing of her brother and isolation from her mother, she found a voice in the truckers.

Marilyn continues to take care of her mother and fight back against the system that stole so much time from their family.
